IN ROBINSON CRUSOE'S LAND .-Opposite the harbor of Valparaiso stands the Island of Juan Fernandez, sacred to the memory of Robinson Crusoe "and his man Friday, who kept things tidy and listened to the tales his master told." There isn't a boy where the English tongue is spoken who han't read a description of this Island better told than I am able to give it, and it is only necessaryto say that Daniel Defoe, or whoever wrote the book, must or whoever wrote the book, must have studied the place with great attention, or had the island created to suit the picture he gave of it. The little harbor is there, with iits rocks and coves, just as it was when Robinson went ashore; the cave is in good order still, and the cliffs up secure from the floods to which the low which he and Friday used to chase the mountain goats. The goats are there, and the armadilios, the birds of wonderful plummage and the crawfish among the rocks. Every boy in the United States who has values of various forms of lamp shades. boy in the United States who has read the story recently could go all over the place without a guide and find everything except Robinson himself and his faithful Friday. The island belongs to Chili, and is leased to a cattle company, which has 10,000 or 30,000 head of cattle, and as many more sheep over the hills. There are about fifty or sixty inhabitants, randsmen with their families, under the charge of a Frenchman named Crawe, and besides the stock, they raise a quantity of poultry, and ship chickens and eggs, with some vegetables, to the Valparaiso market. Sledges and Reindeer in Lapland.
(Sopius Trombalt's Travela!

The only means of couveyance afforded by the country was the reindeer sledges, and the author gives a graphic picture of the manner in which the reindeer is pre-the manner in which the reindeer is prepared for duty.

"First, two symmetrical bits of wood are laid above and below the neck of the deer and fastened together. From the middle of these a band runs down on each side to a wooden block under the stomach immediately behind the fore legs. To this block the single trace is attached, generally made of reindeer skin. From the end of the wooden block again a broad belt runs over the back of the animal, while around the neck a rope is placed to which the rein is fastened. This is the whole harness. It is loose and primative, but doubtless best adopted to reindeer drivers.

"The sleigh seems from its construction to be better adapted to water than to land traveling. Cut a low boat in halves, take the stem part and close it behind with a perpendicular piece of wood, and you have a pulk. It is about the length of a man; without any covering whatever, and completely empty, the driver sitting down on the bottom. As it is provided with a keel, it will be etty clear that it is about as easily managed as a boat on terra firms. The pulk is built of birchwood, but the keel is of fir. What is most annoying to the uninitiated several feeling of horror. Some friend said that B. B. B. would cure her. I produced it and placed her upon its use, and to the utter astonishment of all who knew her the recovery was rapid and complete. It acted as a powerful tonic, gave her a splendid appetite and acted upon the kidneys. A few bottles did the work The action of B. B. B. was decidedly quick, and the medicine cost but little. I advise my friends to use it as a blood purifier. Yours truly, R. M. LAWSON. What is most annoying to the uninitiated is that the pulk does not, as the sleigh, travel on runners, but on a little keel, and capsizes in consequence at the slightest bump or want of balance on the part of the driver, and that it is drawn by a sin-gle trace and not by shafts, from which it follows that the reindeer can not hold it back down hill, which often causes the traveler to come down rather more precipitately than he might wish, and finally that two reins are not used.

"There is, however, good reason why the Lapps prefer the single to the double system, and each one has advantages of system, and each one has advantages of its particular kind in reference to the nature of the road. A sleigh would, for instance, sink far deeper into the loose snow, and be knocked to pieces over rough ground, where the road is obstructed with logs and stones, and the pulk has often to shoot down a declivity of a couple of yards. The sleigh would capsive outleker than the pulk strange as it size quicker than the pulk, strange as it may seem, as the latter capsizes only in the hands of an inexperienced driver.

The Age of the Mounds.

[Norristown Herald.]
Dr. Cyrus Thomas, who is in charge of the division on mound exploration of the Bureau of Ethnology, has in the last three years obtained about 15,000 specimens of the bandiwork of the mound builders, the study of which, with the survey of the mounds themselves and their surround-ings, is gradually leading to a solution of certain arch tologic riddles which a few years ago seemed insolvable.

While some of the mounds are doubtless very ancient, others similar in character and equally interesting have certainly been built up since the advent of Europeans. A string of sleigh bells much corroded but still capable of tinkling, was found among the fiint and bone implements in a mound in Tennessee, while in Mississippi, at the point where De Soto is supposed to have tarried a Spanish coat of arms in silver, one blade of a pair of scissors and other articles of European manufacture were found in positions which indicated that they were buried by the original builders of the mounds. In a Georgia mound two copper plates were found, upon which were stamped the Central American ruins. The workmanship is vastly superior to that displayed on the articles of pottery, stone and bone found in the mounds, and their origin and purpose are not yet ex-plainable. Aside from these plates noth-ing has been found to indicate a connec-tion between the mound builders and the Aztecs or the Pueblos, while on the other erections. The purpose of the mounds still re-mains in some cases a mystery, but in secure from the floods to which the low lands were periodically subjected.
